At A Glance

- 1 A practical guide to the Consumer Price Index (CPI) and the gap between measured inflation and real monthly costs. No single government source publishes this comparison.
- 2 Seven income groups, drawn from federal data and treated equally: one adult and two adults; a median household (a fixed figure); a senior 65+ and a senior couple 65+; and a household on one or two average Social Security benefits.
- 3 All 50 states and all 435 congressional districts, summarized here as national averages weighted by state population. July 2026 report month, rebuilt monthly, so any change in a household's margin shows up the month it happens.
- 4 The TrueCOLA Monthly Margin Report is built from federal source data and Zillow rent data, covering 435 congressional districts, 50 states, and 7 income groups.
- 5 This report does not give any financial or legal advice. It takes no position on any policy or program.

This guide is built to be used: find the row closest to your own household and housing situation, and read your own numbers, for your state and your district. Behind it is one idea. The price index behind official cost-of-living math gives housing a small share of the budget, but the same rent takes a very different share of every real household's income. This guide shows that comparison for seven income groups, treated equally. No policy positions. No advice. Just the numbers and where they come from.

THE ONE-MINUTE VERSION

The Short Version

This guide follows seven income groups, built from four income baselines in federal data: one adult and two adults on per-person income, a median household (a fixed figure), a senior household (65+) and a senior couple (65+), and a household living on one or two average Social Security benefits. For each one, it subtracts the required monthly costs (housing, healthcare, and essential living costs) from net monthly income. What is left is the monthly margin. On the renter track, six of the seven end the month behind:

ONE ADULT -$2,465 Renter margin / mo	TWO ADULTS -$1,950 Renter margin / mo	MEDIAN HOUSEHOLD -$949 Renter margin / mo	SENIOR 65+ -$518 Renter margin / mo
SENIOR COUPLE 65+ +$1,933 Renter margin / mo	SOCIAL SECURITY -$2,925 Renter margin / mo	TWO SOCIAL SECURITY -$2,865 Renter margin / mo

Owning is cheaper, but for one person it does not change the ending. Every one-person renter and blended-owner margin is still negative; even the strongest of those, a senior owner, comes up $110 short each month. Only where a senior or median household owns free and clear, with the mortgage fully paid off, does a one-person margin turn positive. A second income changes the ending for senior households:

a senior couple ends the month ahead on every housing path. For nearly every other household and housing path examined, the essentials cost more than the income coming in this month at national averages.

Housing is only part of it. For one adult, the other essentials (food, transportation, utilities, phone, internet, and other essential costs) add up to about $2,872 a month, more than the rent itself (Part 5 breaks this down). And the gap is not a big-city exception: a renting adult on a per-person income ends the month behind in all 435 congressional districts (Part 8 counts them). Why doesn't the official inflation measure show this? Because a price index tracks the average proportions of a large survey group, and those proportions can sit far from any one household's reality. The index gives rent about eleven cents of every dollar spent. At the seven incomes in this guide, actual market rent takes anywhere from about 22% to 93% of net monthly income. The rest of this guide unpacks that, one step at a time, with the same care for every group.

01 What the Consumer Price Index Measures

The Consumer Price Index is published every month by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It tracks the price of a fixed “basket” of goods and services a typical household buys, and reports how much that basket's cost changes over time. When you hear “inflation was 3 percent last year,” that number came from a Consumer Price Index.

There is more than one Consumer Price Index, and two matter here:

CPI-U · All Urban Consumers

Non-housing expense categories in this guide are updated to the current period using CPI-U series. Rent uses Zillow ZORI weighted by ACS housing units. Social Security cost-of-living adjustments follow SSA's CPI-W formula. Income figures draw from the ACS 5-Year Census Survey; health premiums draw from CMS Medicare Part B and ACA Marketplace average premium data.

CPI-W · Urban Wage Earners

A narrower index covering households paid mainly by the hour or in clerical roles. It has been the basis for the annual Social Security cost-of-living adjustment since 1975 and that formula has not been updated since the BLS introduced the broader CPI-U in 1978. This guide uses CPI-W solely for the headline inflation rate column; all expense price updating uses CPI-U.

Both indexes share the same basic design: a basket, a set of weights, and a monthly reading of how the basket's cost moves. That design is the important part, because the weights describe the average of a very large survey group, not the budget of any actual household. The next two parts show what that means in dollars.

IN ONE SENTENCE

The Consumer Price Index answers “how fast are prices rising for the average basket?” The CPI report is arguably the most important report the federal government provides to taxpayers. It does not answer “what share of this household's income do those prices take?” The TrueCOLA Monthly Margin Report answers the second question, for seven income groups.

PART 2

02 The Basket and Its Weights

Inside any Consumer Price Index, every category of spending gets a weight: an official share of the basket called its “relative importance.” Think of the basket as a pie. Housing is one slice, food another, medical care another, transportation another, and so on. The size of each slice reflects how much the average surveyed household spends on that category. Bigger slice, bigger influence on the final inflation number.

The Consumer Price Index basket, as the index sees it. Bureau of Labor Statistics Relative Importance tables, U.S. city average, CPI-W.

In the published tables, rent of a primary residence carries a weight of 10.697% (Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. city average, wage-earner index table). In plain terms: in the average household the index describes, rent is assumed to be a little under eleven cents of every dollar spent. The basket also carries a separate 21.8% weight for “owners’ equivalent rent,” a stand-in for what homeowners would pay to rent their own homes. Those two slices exist because the survey group mixes renters and owners together. That is also why this guide reports a renter track and a homeowner track separately.

Why an average proportion can miss every real household

An eleven-percent rent slice is what you get when you average across a survey group where most households own their homes and incomes span a wide range. But no individual household is that average. A renting household, whatever its income, pays the full market rent out of its own pocket, and the share that rent takes depends entirely on the size of that income. Part 3 puts numbers on exactly that.

None of this is a secret or a math mistake. The statistical agencies publish their weights openly. The point of this guide is simply to place those weights next to real incomes and real costs, so any reader can see the proportion for a household like theirs.

PART 3 · PROPORTION TO INCOME

03 The Same Rent, Seven Very Different Shares of Income

The national average market rent is $1,936.23 a month (Zillow Observed Rent Index, June 2026 data, July 2026 report; rent only, before utilities, insurance, parking, or fees). That single number lands very differently depending on income. Here is that one rent as a share of net monthly income for all seven income groups (one adult, two adults, the median household, a senior 65+, a senior couple 65+, and one or two Social Security benefits), next to the roughly 11% share the index basket assigns:

Same rent ($1,936.23) in every row; only the income changes. Shares rounded to the nearest percent. Two adults, two seniors, and two Social Security benefits are the two-person incomes; the median household is a fixed whole-household figure (a 3-or-more-person household) and stays the same in both rows.

Every row sits far above the basket's share, roughly about two to nearly nine times above it, depending on the income. Another way to see the same thing: for $1,936.23 of rent to be only 10.697 percent of a household's spending, that household would have to spend about $18,100 a month on everything combined ($$1,936.23 \div 0.10697 \approx $18,101$). None of the seven incomes in this guide comes anywhere close to that spending level.

READ THIS PART CAREFULLY

This is an illustration of the index's structural weight, not a claim that the index sets a dollar rent allowance for anyone, and not a claim that any payment is calculated by multiplying an income by 10.697 percent.

Price indexes measure how a broad group's total spending changes over time; they are not a personal budget. What this comparison shows is how far the basket's average proportions sit from the reality of renting households of every type examined. (Using the CPI-U's own tables makes the gap on this illustration even larger.)

PART 4

04 Four Baselines, Seven Income Groups

Each income level in this guide comes from a named federal source, and all seven income groups are treated identically: same subtraction, same cost categories, same two housing tracks. Taxes are figured with the 2026 Internal Revenue Service schedules (federal, payroll, and state), so every baseline is shown as gross income and the net amount that actually arrives each month. Followed for one person and for two people sharing a home, the four baselines become the seven income groups charted in Part 3.

Adult	Income per person, from Census American Community Survey data, taxed as a single filer.	1 person ~$3,717 → $3,079 2 people ~$7,434 → $6,152
Median household	The middle household income in America, from Census American Community Survey data, taxed as a single filer.	$6,850 → $5,330 Fixed household 3-or-more person household
Senior 65+	The middle income for households headed by someone 65 or older, from Census American Community Survey senior-income data, taxed with the senior deductions that apply in 2026.	1 person ~$4,966 → $4,493 2 people ~$9,931 → $8,970
Social Security	The average retired-worker benefit (Social Security Administration Monthly Statistical Snapshot), with zero federal, payroll, and state tax; the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium is counted inside required costs.	1 person $2,085.98 → $2,086 2 people $4,171.96 → $4,172

One baseline is a per-person figure, one is the national median, one describes senior households, and one is a program benchmark. Together they cover the income range most households fall into, which is the point. Each baseline is shown for one person and, where two people share the home, for two; the median household is a fixed figure for a household of three or more people and does not double. The question is the same at every level: after the essentials, what is left?

05 What Counts as Required Obligations

“Required obligations” in the margin tables are the essentials: housing, healthcare, and essential living costs: food, utilities, transportation, phone and internet, and the like, each updated with current prices and adjusted for local price levels. The same categories apply to every household type. Two of the inputs deserve a closer look, because they carry the most weight.

The housing line: two tracks

RENTER TRACK

$1,936.23 / mo

Zillow Observed Rent Index, national. Observed rent on market listings: just the rent, not utilities or fees.

HOMEOWNER TRACK

$1,527.59 / mo

Census Bureau Selected Monthly Owner Costs: a blended line that combines a homeowner's regular monthly housing costs into one number.

The healthcare line: matched to household type

- For households on marketplace coverage, the model uses the average marketplace premium before subsidy: $735.50 a month for one person and $1,471.01 for two (population-weighted national average of the state benchmarks; Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services Marketplace data).
- For the two senior baselines, the healthcare line is the standard $202.90 monthly Medicare Part B premium, one premium per person: $202.90 for one senior and $405.80 for a senior couple.

The rest of the basket: bigger than the rent

Housing gets the headlines, but the quiet categories add up to more. For one adult, the essentials besides housing and health insurance come to about $2,872 a month, more than the rent itself, and more than the entire average Social Security check. For two people the same categories come to about $4,695 a month; shared items like utilities, phone, and internet do not double. Each category is priced from federal spending data, updated with current prices, and adjusted for local price levels:

Essential living costs, national monthly averages, July 2026. One adult ≈ $2,872 in total; two people ≈ $4,695 (shared utilities, phone, and internet do not double). Both sit on top of housing and healthcare. Bureau of Labor Statistics spending and price data, localized with Bureau of Economic Analysis Regional Price Parities.

Put the three pieces side by side and the shape of the problem is clear. For one adult renting: essentials ≈ $2,872, housing ≈ $1,936, health insurance ≈ $736. For two adults renting: essentials ≈ $4,695, the same $1,936 rent shared, and health insurance ≈ $1,471. Housing is the single biggest line, but the essentials as a group outweigh it, which is why a cheaper apartment alone rarely closes the gap.

In each row of the tables that follow, the arithmetic is identical: net monthly income – required obligations = monthly margin.

PART 6 · THE HEART OF THE GUIDE

06 The Margin Tables: Seven Income Groups, Every Path

Here is the full picture for all seven income groups: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out of it, the net income that actually arrives, and then the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. Find the row closest to your own income and housing situation and read across. Every row uses the same method.

One person

Gross monthly income, the 2026 federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, and the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths. Renter housing is the Zillow market rent; the three owner paths use the Census Selected Monthly Owner Costs, blended and split by mortgage status.

HOUSEHOLD	INCOME: GROSS TO NET, MONTHLY					MONTHLY MARGIN BY HOUSING PATH
	GROSS	FEDERAL	PAYROLL	STATE	NET	RENTER	OWNER	OWN, WITH MORTGAGE	OWN, PAID OFF
One adult	$3,717	$264	$284	$89	$3,079	- $2,465	- $2,056	-$2,628	-$1,233
Median household	$6,850	$774	$524	$221	$5,330	-$949	-$540	-$1,112	+$283
Senior 65+	$4,966	$334	$0	$138	$4,493	-$518	-$110	-$682	+$713
Social Security	$2,086	$0	$0	$0	$2,086	- $2,925	- $2,517	-$3,089	-$1,694

Two people

The same income path and four housing paths for a two-person household, with two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Median-household income is a fixed figure for a 3-or-more-person household and is shown unchanged in both tables; the housing line is the same rent or owner cost either way.

HOUSEHOLD	INCOME: GROSS TO NET, MONTHLY					MONTHLY MARGIN BY HOUSING PATH
	GROSS	FEDERAL	PAYROLL	STATE	NET	RENTER	OWNER	OWN, WITH MORTGAGE	OWN, PAID OFF
One adult	$7,434	$529	$569	$185	$6,152	-$1,950	-$1,541	-$2,113	-$718
Median household	$6,850	$774	$524	$221	$5,330	-$949	-$540	-$1,112	+$283
Senior 65+	$9,931	$677	$0	$284	$8,970	+$1,933	+$2,342	+$1,770	+$3,165
Social Security	$4,172	$0	$0	$0	$4,172	-$2,865	-$2,456	-$3,028	-$1,633

Reading the tables

On the renter track, one-person households fall short by $518 to $2,925 a month. Owning is cheaper: the blended owner cost drops the housing line by about $409, and a paid-off home drops it much further. Even then, one adult and a Social Security household stay negative on every path; only a senior or a median household owning free and clear turns positive (about +$713 and +$283 a month). For two people, income roughly doubles but so do food, transportation, and healthcare. The two-person senior baseline is the one that clears the essentials this month (about +$1,933 renting, and more as an owner), while one adult, the median household, and Social Security stay negative on every path. Across the whole income span the pattern holds: for most households, the essentials consume all of the income, and then some.

That is what “proportionate to income” means in practice. The official basket assigns housing a modest average share; real households give up a far larger one, and the margin column shows what remains once healthcare and the other essentials are added on top. No single group is the story here. The proportion is the story, and it repeats at every level.

WHERE THE MATH WORKS

The same tables carry the paths that clear the essentials. A senior couple ends the month ahead on every housing path, about +$1,933 renting and more as an owner. A paid-off home turns the one-person senior margin positive (about +$713) and the median household’s as well (about +$283). And at the state level, several states post positive margins for the median household and for seniors; the Top 10 lists in Appendix B·1a show where. The subtraction is the same everywhere; where incomes clear the essentials, the tables say so just as plainly.

NOTES ON THE TABLES

These national figures are population-weighted averages of the fifty states’ July 2026 data; whole-dollar values include presentation rounding, while the underlying calculations use full-precision figures. Federal, payroll, and state tax use the 2026 Internal Revenue Service and state schedules; the net column is gross income minus all three. The four housing paths share the same net income and the same non-housing essentials; only the housing line changes: market rent for renters, and the blended, with-mortgage, and paid-off owner costs for the three owner paths. The Part B premium sits inside required obligations for the senior baselines, not deducted from income. State and district rows will differ from these national averages. Two-person figures come from the two-person data tabs of the same report, with the two-person average marketplace premium or two Part B premiums where they apply.

PART 7

07 Renting and Owning: Different Bills, Same Math

The two housing tracks exist because renters and owners pay different line items, not because either group escapes the math. A renter pays one visible number. A homeowner's costs come as a stack: mortgage or none, property tax, insurance, fees, and upkeep. The blended owner-cost line hides a big split underneath:

THE BLENDED OWNER COST, SPLIT OPEN

With a mortgage (61%)  $2,100

Without a mortgage (39%)

$705

About 61% of owner households carry a mortgage, and their monthly housing cost is roughly three times that of the households who have paid theirs off. The $1,527.59 blended line in the margin tables averages the two. A paid-off home softens the housing line a lot: as Part 6 shows, it turns the one-person senior and median-household margins positive, and a senior couple ends well ahead. For the other income groups, even a paid-off home leaves the month in the red, because healthcare and essentials sit on top of housing.

The takeaway is symmetrical: renting concentrates the cost in one line; owning spreads it across several. That is why the margin tables now carry four housing paths side by side, renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear, so the difference between still paying a mortgage and having paid it off is visible for every income group, one person or two. Either way, the share of income consumed is set by the income, which is why the report publishes all of them, for every state and district, every month.

PART 8

08 Where You Live Changes the Math

Every figure so far is a national average, and national averages hide how much geography matters. The report adjusts every essential-cost category for local price levels (using the federal government's Regional Price Parities), and two states, Alabama and Alaska, show how much it changes:

MARKET RENT

$1,408 → $1,884+

Monthly Zillow market rent in Alabama vs. Alaska, and the coasts run higher still.

MARKETPLACE PREMIUM

$743 → $1,043+

The same average marketplace premium for one person, Alabama vs. Alaska.

EVERYDAY ESSENTIALS

0.89× → 1.02×+

Local price factors applied to food, utilities, and other essentials, state by state.

STATE INCOME TAX

$0 → hundreds

Some states collect no income tax; others collect hundreds a month.

Every district, counted

The report runs the same subtraction in every one of the 435 congressional districts. Here is how many districts end the month negative, for each income group and housing track, one-person and two-person:

HOUSEHOLD	ONE PERSON			TWO PEOPLE
	RENTER	OWNER	MARGIN RANGE (RENTER)	RENTER	OWNER	MARGIN RANGE (RENTER)
One adult	435 of 435	434 of 435	-$4,419 to -$23	410 of 435	405 of 435	-$4,837 to +$6,013
Median household	363 of 435	340 of 435	-$3,985 to +$2,891	363 of 435	340 of 435	-$3,985 to +$2,891
Senior 65+	338 of 435	239 of 435	-$3,878 to +$2,893	25 of 435	11 of 435	-$2,525 to +$8,979
Social Security	435 of 435	435 of 435	-$5,404 to -$1,782	435 of 435	435 of 435	-$5,420 to -$1,534

Districts where net income minus required obligations is below zero, one-person and two-person tracks, July 2026 report data, all 435 districts. Owner counts use the blended owner cost. These are counts and ranges across all of them; the district tables in Appendix C carry each district's rank.

FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Every district in the report is listed with its representative's name, and every state with both senators, so any House or Senate office can open its own row and read the margins for the households it represents. A renting adult on a per-person income ends the month behind in every district in the country; a household on the average Social Security benefit ends behind in every district on both housing tracks. Two incomes do not close the gap in most districts: two renting adults still end the month behind in 410 of the 435 districts, while a two-person senior household ends ahead in most. Even where the median household does fine, the same district's other rows usually do not.

This is why the report behind this guide is published for all 50 states and all 435 congressional districts. The margins where you live, for every household type, may be meaningfully wider or narrower than the national rows in this guide, and the state and district tables are where you can see your own.

PART 9

09 How the Monthly Report Is Organized

This guide summarizes national averages; the full report behind it is published monthly and is built the same way for everyone. Knowing its structure makes it easy to find your own numbers:

- 1 Four data tabs. One-person and two-person versions, at the state level (50 rows) and the congressional-district level (435 rows). Every state and district is ranked by one disclosed rule, and no place is otherwise featured or singled out.
- 2 Columns are cost categories. Housing, healthcare, food, transportation, utilities, phone, internet, and the rest, each mapped to a named source.
- 3 Two housing tracks everywhere. The renter track (market rent) and the homeowner track (Selected Monthly Owner Costs) are published side by side for every row.
- 4 Four baselines, seven income groups, same method. Every row applies the identical subtraction to all seven income groups, exactly as shown in Part 6.
- 5 A monthly schedule. The report is rebuilt each month with the newest official data, and fails closed if a live source is unavailable.
- 6 A public paper trail. Every source file is logged with a cryptographic fingerprint, every formula is publicly disclosed, and every build runs an automated quality check before release.

The design principle is uniformity: the same data, for every place, on the same schedule, in the same format, and the same arithmetic for every household type.

PART 10

10 Why No Official Source Publishes This

A fair question: if the comparison is this straightforward, why doesn't a government agency already publish it? The answer is that no federal agency publishes monthly rent in actual dollars at the congressional-district level. The pieces exist, but not in the form this comparison needs.

- The Bureau of Labor Statistics publishes rent as a percent change in an index: for the country, four regions, and about seventy-five metro areas, not as a dollar figure per district.
- The Department of Housing and Urban Development publishes Fair Market Rent in dollars, but annually and lagged twelve to twenty-four months by survey design.

So the gap being filled is not a quality gap; it is a gap in the existence of the measurement. That is the one place a non-federal source is used for rent: the Zillow Observed Rent Index, the only widely-cited, well-documented monthly publication of rent in dollars at the needed level of detail, a methodology cited by the Federal Reserve, Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development itself in selected analyses. It is always labeled as non-federal, never presented as government data.

TRUST AND TRACEABILITY

Where These Numbers Come From

Every figure in this guide can be traced to its source. Federal data does the heavy lifting; one non-federal dataset (Zillow market rent) is used only where no federal equivalent exists, and it is clearly labeled wherever it appears.

HOW THE FIGURES ARE KEPT HONEST

Every federal source is pulled from its official agency portal, and each retrieval is stamped with the date and a cryptographic fingerprint of the file, so the exact inputs can be re-checked later. Every published number is produced by a documented calculation; every calculation and disclosure is published alongside the data. And every build runs an automated quality check before release; this month's build passed 353 of 355 tests; 2 were skipped and 0 failed.

These figures reflect the July 2026 report month (quality score 100/100), shown as national averages weighted by state population.

APPENDIX B·1A · STATE RANKINGS

The 50 States: Top 10 and Bottom 10, by Income Group

For each of the seven income groups, the ten states with the best margins (top 10) and the ten with the weakest margins (weakest 10), using each group's rank from the full state tables that follow. Ranks reflect the report's disclosed ranking rule, the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, so they may not sort exactly by the single margin shown here. The margin shown is the renter-track monthly margin; the full tables carry all four housing paths. July 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B.1 • STATE RANKINGS

One Adult, Per-Person Income: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for one adult living on that state's per-person income, taxed as a single filer. Health inside required obligations is the one-person average marketplace premium (family premium for two people). Each state appears twice, once for one person and once for two people, so all seven income groups in this guide are covered across the four ranking sections. States are listed alphabetically. The rank column ranks states by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins; rank 1 has the best margin, rank 50 the weakest, and the same rank is shown in both sub-tables. The district tables in Appendix C are ranked the same way. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. July 2026 report month.

Median Household Income: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household earning that state's median household income, taxed as a single filer. The median household represents a household of three or more people, so it has its own single table here instead of the one-person and two-person versions used for the other groups; its health line uses the two-person average marketplace premium. States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. July 2026 report month.

Senior Household 65+: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household headed by someone 65 or older, on that state's median senior-household income, taxed with the 2026 senior deductions. Health is the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium (two premiums for two people). States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. July 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B·4 · STATE RANKINGS

Social Security Benchmark: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household on the average retired-worker Social Security benefit, with zero federal, payroll, and state tax. Health is the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium (two premiums for two people). States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. July 2026 report month.

APPENDIX C·0 · DISTRICT TABLES

All 435 Districts: Top 10 and Bottom 10, by Income Group

For each of the seven income groups, the ten districts with the best margins (top 10) and the ten with the weakest margins (weakest 10), using each group's rank from the full district tables that follow. Ranks reflect the report's disclosed ranking rule, the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, so they may not sort exactly by the single margin shown here. The margin shown is the renter-track monthly margin; the full tables carry all four housing paths. July 2026 report month.

APPENDIX C-1 • DISTRICT TABLES

One Adult, Per-Person Income: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for one adult living on the per-person income of that district, taxed as a single filer. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the one-person average marketplace premium for that district's state; the two-person table uses the two-person average marketplace premium. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

Median Household Income: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household earning the median household income of that district, taxed as a single filer. The median household is a whole-household figure covering households of every size, so it is shown once, as a single table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. Health inside required obligations is the two-person average marketplace premium for that district's state. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

Senior Household 65+: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household headed by someone 65 or older, on that district's median senior-household income, taxed with 2026 senior deductions. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the standard $202.90 Medicare Part B premium; the two-person table includes two Part B premiums. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

APPENDIX C-4 · DISTRICT TABLES

Social Security Benchmark: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household living on the average retired-worker Social Security benefit, with zero federal, payroll, and state tax. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the standard $202.90 Medicare Part B premium; the two-person table includes two Part B premiums. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

All four tables: monthly margin = net monthly income – required obligations (housing + healthcare + essential living costs) in that district. Renter track uses market rent; homeowner track uses blended owner costs. Other essentials combines recreation, apparel, education & communication, telephone, internet, and other goods & services. July 2026 report month, whole-dollar rounding. Like the state rankings, each table is split into a one-person and a two-person sub-table carrying the full income path, gross to net, and all four margins; the median-household table is a whole-household figure shown once. Two-person figures use two-person income, taxes, and expenses.

REFERENCE

Plain-Language Glossary

Consumer Price Index

A monthly measure of how the cost of a fixed basket of goods and services changes over time; the basis for most inflation figures.

CPI-U

The “All Urban Consumers” index: the headline inflation number in the news, covering the broad urban population.

CPI-W

The “Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers” index, a narrower variant; it drives the yearly Social Security adjustment. This guide uses it only for the headline inflation rate; expense categories are price-updated with CPI-U.

Relative importance (weight)

The official share of the Consumer Price Index basket assigned to a category: how big that spending “slice” is, and therefore how much it moves the index.

Owners' equivalent rent

A stand-in the Consumer Price Index uses to estimate what homeowners would pay to rent their own homes; it carries a large weight in the basket.

Required obligations

In this guide's tables, the sum of housing, healthcare, and essential living costs subtracted from income to find the monthly margin.

Zillow Observed Rent Index

A non-federal, monthly measure of market rent in dollars, used here because no federal source publishes rent in dollars at the district level.

Selected Monthly Owner Costs

A Census figure combining a homeowner's regular monthly housing costs into one blended line; it forms the housing line in the homeowner track.

Average marketplace premium before subsidy

A reference health-insurance premium on the marketplace, used as the healthcare line for households on marketplace coverage.

Medicare Part B premium

The standard monthly medical-insurance premium; it is the healthcare line for the two senior baselines.

Regional Price Parities

A federal Bureau of Economic Analysis measure of how much prices in each state sit above or below the national average; the report uses it to localize essential costs.

Monthly margin

Net monthly income minus required obligations: positive if income covers the essentials with room to spare, negative if it does not.

End of guide. An educational, plain-language explanation of the Consumer Price Index and the gap between measured inflation and real monthly costs, shown for seven income groups with equal weight. It takes no position on any policy or program, supports or opposes no legislation, and offers no financial or voting advice. Figures reflect the July 2026 report month (quality score 100/100) and national averages weighted by state population for all seven income groups, one person and two; the state and district tables carry the same detail for every place.

BEFORE YOU GO

Using Your Row

Three ways to put this report to work. Find your district in Appendix C and your state in Appendix B, and read the margin for the household most like yours. Compare the four housing paths in your row; the difference between them is the report's answer to "what would change the math where I live." And check back next month: the report is rebuilt with the newest data on a fixed schedule, so your row is re-measured every month, and any change in your margin appears the month it happens.
