At A Glance

- 1 A practical guide to the Consumer Price Index (CPI) and the gap between measured inflation and real monthly costs. No single government source publishes this comparison.
- 2 Seven income groups, drawn from federal data and treated equally: one adult and two adults; a median household (a fixed figure); a senior 65+ and a senior couple 65+; a household on one average Social Security benefit; and a retired couple on Two Social Security, the Social Security Administration's aged-couple benefit. Group A rows use the CPI-U end to end; Group B rows (Social Security and Two Social Security) use the CPI-W.
- 3 All 50 states and all 435 congressional districts, summarized here as national averages weighted by state population. August 2026 report month, rebuilt monthly, so any change in a household's margin shows up the month it happens.
- 4 The TrueCOLA Monthly Margin Report is built from federal source data and Zillow rent data, covering 435 congressional districts, 50 states, and 7 income groups.
- 5 This report does not give any financial or legal advice. It takes no position on any policy or program.

This guide is built to be used: find the row closest to your own household and housing situation, and read your own numbers, for your state and your district. Behind it is one idea. The price index behind official cost-of-living math gives housing a small share of the budget, but the same rent takes a very different share of every real household's income. This guide shows that comparison for seven income groups, treated equally. No policy positions. No advice. Just the numbers and where they come from.

THE ONE-MINUTE VERSION

The Short Version

This guide follows seven income groups, built from four income baselines in federal data: one adult and two adults on per-person income, a median household (a fixed figure), a senior household (65+) and a senior couple (65+), a household living on one average Social Security benefit, and a retired couple on Two Social Security (the Social Security Administration's aged-couple benefit). Group A rows use the CPI-U end to end; Group B rows, the two Social Security rows, use the CPI-W. For each one, it subtracts the required monthly costs (housing, healthcare, and essential living costs) from net monthly income. What is left is the monthly margin. On the renter track, all seven income groups end the month behind at national averages:

ONE ADULT -$2,475 Renter margin / mo GROUP A · CPI-U	TWO ADULTS -$1,964 Renter margin / mo GROUP A · CPI-U	MEDIAN HOUSEHOLD -$959 Renter margin / mo GROUP A · CPI-U	SENIOR 65+ -$529 Renter margin / mo GROUP A · CPI-U
SENIOR COUPLE 65+ -$474 Renter margin / mo GROUP A · CPI-U	SOCIAL SECURITY -$2,936 Renter margin / mo GROUP B · CPI-W	TWO SOCIAL SECURITY -$3,842 Renter margin / mo

Owning is cheaper, but for one person it does not change the ending. Every one-person renter and blended-owner margin is still negative; even the strongest of those, a senior owner, comes up $121 short each month. Only where a senior or median household owns free and clear, with the mortgage fully paid off, does a one-person margin turn positive. A second income narrows the gap for senior households but does not close it: a senior couple still ends the month about $474 short renting and about $66 short at the blended owner cost, and clears the essentials only with the mortgage paid off (about +$757). For nearly every other household and housing path examined, the essentials cost more than the income coming in this month at national averages.

Housing is only part of it. For one adult, the other essentials (food, transportation, utilities, phone, internet, and other essential costs) add up to about $2,882 a month, more than the rent itself (Part 5 breaks this down). And the gap is not a big-city exception: a renting adult on a per-person income ends the month behind in all 435 congressional districts (Part 8 counts them). Why doesn't the official inflation measure show this? Because a price index tracks the average proportions of a large survey group, and those proportions can sit far from any one household's reality. The index gives rent about eight cents of every dollar spent in the CPI-U basket (Group A rows) and about eleven cents in the CPI-W basket (Group B rows). At the seven incomes in this guide, actual market rent takes anywhere from about 29% to 93% of net monthly income. The rest of this guide unpacks that, one step at a time, with the same care for every group.

PART 1

01 What the Consumer Price Index Measures

The Consumer Price Index is published every month by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It tracks the price of a fixed “basket” of goods and services a typical household buys, and reports how much that basket's cost changes over time. When you hear “inflation was 3 percent last year,” that number came from a Consumer Price Index.

BLS publishes two versions of the Consumer Price Index from the same prices. The CPI-U covers all urban consumers, about 93 percent of Americans: wage earners, salaried workers, the self-employed, the unemployed, and retirees in metropolitan and micropolitan counties. The CPI-W covers the urban households that earn more than half of their income from clerical or wage jobs and had an earner working 37 weeks or more in the past year, about 29 percent. Federal law uses the CPI-W to adjust Social Security income each year.

Every CPI-W household is also a CPI-U household. The two are not separate groups. About 7 percent of Americans, in rural counties, on farms, in the armed forces, or in institutions, are in neither.

Both indexes share the same basic design: a basket, a set of weights, and a monthly reading of how the basket's cost moves. That design is the important part, because the weights describe the average of a very large survey group, not the budget of any actual household. The next two parts show what that means in dollars.

WHICH GROUP ARE YOU IN?

Each TrueCOLA household row uses one index end to end: its weights, its price updating, and its headline rate. Group A uses the CPI-U. Group B uses the CPI-W, the index federal law uses to adjust Social Security.

Group A (CPI-U): One adult, Two adults, Median household, Senior 65+, Senior couple 65+. Read this group if your income is wages, self-employment, a pension, savings, or a mix. These rows use the CPI-U, the index BLS publishes for all urban consumers.

Group B (CPI-W): Social Security, Two Social Security. Read this group if your household lives on Social Security income. These rows use the CPI-W, the index federal law uses to set the yearly Social Security Cost-of-Living Adjustment (COLA).

Have both a paycheck and Social Security income? Read the row closest to your total income. Every row does the same math: net income minus required costs.

IN ONE SENTENCE

The Consumer Price Index answers “how fast are prices rising for the average basket?” The CPI report is arguably the most important report the federal government provides to taxpayers. It does not answer “what share of this household's income do those prices take?” The TrueCOLA Monthly Margin Report answers the second question, for seven income groups.

PART 2

02 The Basket and Its Weights

Inside any Consumer Price Index, every category of spending gets a weight: an official share of the basket called its “relative importance.” Think of the basket as a pie. Housing is one slice, food another, medical care another, transportation another, and so on. The size of each slice reflects how much the average surveyed household spends on that category. Bigger slice, bigger influence on the final inflation number.

EXPENDITURE CATEGORY	CPI-U (Group A)	CPI-W (Group B)
Food and beverages	14.539	15.579
Housing	44.469	42.658
of which: rent of primary residence	7.840	10.697
of which: owners' equivalent rent	26.204	21.798
Apparel	2.368	2.668
Transportation	16.316	18.256
Medical care	8.423	7.596
Recreation	5.137	4.428
Education and communication	5.846	5.942
Other goods and services	2.902	2.873
All items	100.000	100.000

Each income group uses the complete weight set of one index. Group A rows use the CPI-U column. Group B rows use the CPI-W column. Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics, Relative importance of components in the Consumer Price Indexes, U.S. city average, December 2025, 2024 weights.

In the published tables, rent of a primary residence carries a weight of 7.840 percent in the CPI-U basket (Group A) and 10.697 percent in the CPI-W basket (Group B). The basket also carries a separate weight for “owners' equivalent rent” (a stand-in for what homeowners would pay to rent their own homes): 26.204 percent in the CPI-U and 21.798 percent in the CPI-W. Those two slices exist because the survey group mixes renters and owners together. That is also why this guide reports a renter track and a homeowner track separately.

Why an average proportion can miss every real household

A rent slice of around 8 to 11 percent is what you get when you average across a survey group where most households own their homes and incomes span a wide range. But no individual household is that average. A renting household, whatever its income, pays the full market rent out of its own pocket, and the share that rent takes depends entirely on the size of that income. Part 3 puts numbers on exactly that.

None of this is a secret. The statistical agencies publish their weights openly. The point of this guide is simply to place those weights next to real incomes and real costs, so any reader can see the proportion for a household like theirs.

PART 3 · PROPORTION TO INCOME

03 The Same Rent, Seven Very Different Shares of Income

The national average market rent is $1,935.42 a month (Zillow Observed Rent Index, July 2026 data, August 2026 report; rent only, before utilities, insurance, parking, or fees). That single number lands very differently depending on income. Here is that one rent as a share of net monthly income for all seven income groups (one adult, two adults, the median household, a senior 65+, a senior couple 65+, Social Security, and Two Social Security), next to the assigned index basket share: 7.840 percent for Group A rows (CPI-U) and 10.697 percent for Group B rows (CPI-W):

Same rent ($1,935.42) in every row; only the income changes. Shares rounded to the nearest percent. Two adults, two seniors, and two Social Security benefits are the two-person incomes; the median household is a fixed whole-household figure (a 3-or-more-person household) and stays the same in both rows. Reference lines: 7.840 percent for Group A rows (CPI-U basket); 10.697 percent for Group B rows (CPI-W basket).

Every row sits far above its basket's share, roughly 4 to 9 times above it, depending on the income. Another way to see the same thing: for $1,935.42 of rent to be only 7.840 percent of a household's spending (Group A, CPI-U basket), that household would have to spend about $24,687 a month on everything combined ($$1,935.42 \div 0.07840$). For 10.697 percent (Group B, CPI-W basket), the threshold is about $18,093 ($$1,935.42 \div 0.10697$). None of the seven incomes in this guide comes anywhere close to either spending level.

READ THIS PART CAREFULLY

This is an illustration of the index's structural weight, not a claim that the index sets a dollar rent allowance for anyone, and not a claim that any payment is calculated by multiplying an income by 7.840 or 10.697 percent.

Price indexes measure how a broad group's total spending changes over time; they are not a personal budget. What this comparison shows is how far the basket's average proportions sit from the reality of renting households of every type examined.

PART 4

04 Four Baselines, Seven Income Groups

Each income level in this guide comes from a named federal source, and all seven income groups are treated identically: same subtraction, same cost categories, same two housing tracks. Each group is priced with one index end to end: the Group A baselines with the CPI-U, the Social Security baseline (Group B) with the CPI-W. Taxes are figured with the 2026 Internal Revenue Service schedules (federal, payroll, and state), so every baseline is shown as gross income and the net amount that actually arrives each month. Followed for one person and for two people sharing a home, the four baselines become the seven income groups charted in Part 3.

Adult
GROUP A · CPI-U

Income per person, from Census American Community Survey data, taxed as a single filer.

1 person ~$3,717 → $3,079
2 people ~$7,434 → $6,152

Median household
GROUP A · CPI-U

The middle household income in America, from Census American Community Survey data, taxed as a single filer.

$6,850 → $5,330
Fixed household
3-or-more person household

Senior 65+
GROUP A · CPI-U

The middle income for households headed by someone 65 or older, from Census American Community Survey senior-income data, taxed with the senior deductions that apply in 2026.

1 person ~$4,966 → $4,493
2 people ~$7,083 → $6,577

Social Security
GROUP B · CPI-W

One person: the average retired-worker benefit (Social Security Administration Monthly Statistical Snapshot). Two people: the Social Security Administration's published aged-couple average benefit (2026 Social Security Changes Fact Sheet). Zero federal, payroll, and state tax; the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium is counted inside required costs.

1 person $2,085.98 → $2,086
2 people $3,208.00 → $3,208

One baseline is a per-person figure, one is the national median, one describes senior households, and one is a program benchmark. Together they cover the income range most households fall into, which is the point. Each baseline is shown for one person and, where two people share the home, for two; the median household is a fixed figure for a household of three or more people and does not double. The question is the same at every level: after the essentials, what is left?

PART 5

05 What Counts as Required Obligations

“Required obligations” in the margin tables are the essentials: housing, healthcare, and essential living costs: food, utilities, transportation, phone and internet, and the like, each updated with current prices and adjusted for local price levels. The same categories apply to every household type. Two of the inputs deserve a closer look, because they carry the most weight.

The housing line: two tracks

RENTER TRACK

$1,935.42 / mo

Zillow Observed Rent Index, national. Observed rent on market listings: just the rent, not utilities or fees.

HOMEOWNER TRACK

$1,527.59 / mo

Census Bureau Selected Monthly Owner Costs: a blended line that combines a homeowner’s regular monthly housing costs into one number.

The healthcare line: matched to household type

- For households on marketplace coverage, the model uses the average marketplace premium before subsidy: $735.50 a month for one person and $1,471.01 for two (population-weighted national average of the state benchmarks; Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services Marketplace data).
- For the two senior baselines, the healthcare line is the standard $202.90 monthly Medicare Part B premium, one premium per person: $202.90 for one senior and $405.80 for a senior couple.

The rest of the basket: bigger than the rent

Housing gets the headlines, but the quiet categories add up to more. For one adult, the essentials besides housing and health insurance come to about $2,882 a month, more than the rent itself, and more than the average monthly Social Security benefit. For two people the same categories come to about $4,710 a month; shared items like utilities, phone, and internet do not double. Each category is priced from federal spending data, updated with current prices, and adjusted for local price levels:

Essential living costs, national monthly averages, August 2026. One adult ≈ $2,882 in total; two people ≈ $4,710 (shared utilities, phone, and internet do not double). Both sit on top of housing and healthcare. Bureau of Labor Statistics spending and price data, localized with Bureau of Economic Analysis Regional Price Parities.

Put the three pieces side by side and the shape of the problem is clear. For one adult renting: essentials ≈ $2,882, housing ≈ $1,935, health insurance ≈ $736. For two adults renting: essentials ≈ $4,710, the same $1,935 rent shared, and health insurance ≈ $1,471. Housing is the single biggest line, but the essentials as a group outweigh it, which is why a cheaper apartment alone rarely closes the gap.

In each row of the tables that follow, the arithmetic is identical: net monthly income – required obligations = monthly margin.

PART 6 · THE HEART OF THE GUIDE

06 The Margin Tables: Seven Income Groups, Every Path

Here is the full picture for all seven income groups: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out of it, the net income that actually arrives, and then the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. Find the row closest to your own income and housing situation and read across. Every row uses the same method, and each row is priced with its own index end to end: Group A rows with the CPI-U, Group B rows with the CPI-W.

One person

Gross monthly income, the 2026 federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, and the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths. Renter housing is the Zillow market rent; the three owner paths use the Census Selected Monthly Owner Costs, blended and split by mortgage status.

HOUSEHOLD	INCOME: GROSS TO NET, MONTHLY					MONTHLY MARGIN BY HOUSING PATH
	GROSS	FEDERAL	PAYROLL	STATE	NET	RENTER	OWNER	OWN, WITH MORTGAGE	OWN, PAID OFF

Two people

The same income path and four housing paths for a two-person household, with two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Median-household income is a fixed figure for a 3-or-more-person household and is shown unchanged in both tables; the housing line is the same rent or owner cost either way. Two Social Security is the Social Security Administration's aged-couple benefit, not two retired-worker checks added together.

HOUSEHOLD	INCOME: GROSS TO NET, MONTHLY					MONTHLY MARGIN BY HOUSING PATH
	GROSS	FEDERAL	PAYROLL	STATE	NET	RENTER	OWNER	OWN, WITH MORTGAGE	OWN, PAID OFF
Two adults GROUP A · CPI-U	$7,434	$529	$569	$185	$6,152	-$1,964	-$1,556	-$2,128	-$733
Median household GROUP A · CPI-U	$6,850	$774	$524	$221	$5,330	-$959	-$551	-$1,124	+$271
Senior couple 65+ GROUP A · CPI-U	$7,083	$334	$0	$172	$6,577	-$474	-$66	-$638	+$757

Reading the tables

On the renter track, one-person households fall short by $529 to $2,936 a month. Owning is cheaper: the blended owner cost drops the housing line by about $408, and a paid-off home drops it much further. Even then, one adult and a Social Security household stay negative on every path; only a senior or a median household owning free and clear turns positive (about +$702 and +$271 a month). For two people, income roughly doubles but so do food, transportation, and healthcare. Even the two-person senior baseline ends behind this month, about $474 renting and $66 at the blended owner cost, and clears the essentials only with the mortgage paid off (about +$757). Two adults and Two Social Security stay negative on every path; the median household turns positive only with the mortgage paid off (about +$271). Across the whole income span the pattern holds: for most households, the essentials consume all of the income, and then some.

That is what “proportionate to income” means in practice. The official basket assigns housing a modest average share; real households give up a far larger one, and the margin column shows what remains once healthcare and the other essentials are added on top. No single group is the story here. The proportion is the story, and it repeats at every level.

WHERE THE MATH WORKS

The same tables carry the paths that clear the essentials. A senior couple comes closest among renters and blended owners, about $474 and $66 short, and ends ahead with the mortgage paid off (about +$757). A paid-off home turns the one-person senior margin positive (about +$702) and the median household’s as well (about +$271). And at the state level, several states post positive margins for the median household and for seniors; the Top 10 lists in Appendix B-1a show where. The subtraction is the same everywhere; where incomes clear the essentials, the tables say so just as plainly.

NOTES ON THE TABLES

These national figures are population-weighted averages of the fifty states’ August 2026 data; whole-dollar values include presentation rounding, while the underlying calculations use full-precision figures. Federal, payroll, and state tax use the 2026 Internal Revenue Service and state schedules; the net column is gross income minus all three. The four housing paths share the same net income and the same non-housing essentials; only the housing line changes: market rent for renters, and the blended, with-mortgage, and paid-off owner costs for the three owner paths. The Part B premium sits inside required obligations for the senior baselines, not deducted from income. Essential living costs are price-updated with each row’s own index: CPI-U series for Group A rows, CPI-W series for Group B rows. State and district rows will differ from these national averages. Two-person figures come from the two-person data tabs of the same report, with the two-person average marketplace premium or two Part B premiums where they apply.

PART 7

07 Renting and Owning: Different Bills, Same Math

The two housing tracks exist because renters and owners pay different line items, not because either group escapes the math. A renter pays one visible number. A homeowner's costs come as a stack: mortgage or none, property tax, insurance, fees, and upkeep. The blended owner-cost line hides a big split underneath:

THE BLENDED OWNER COST, SPLIT OPEN

With a mortgage (61%)		$2,100
Without a mortgage (39%)		$705

About 61% of owner households carry a mortgage, and their monthly housing cost is roughly three times that of the households who have paid theirs off. The $1,527.59 blended line in the margin tables averages the two. A paid-off home softens the housing line a lot: as Part 6 shows, it turns the one-person senior and median-household margins positive, and it is the one path on which a senior couple ends ahead. For the other income groups, even a paid-off home leaves the month in the red, because healthcare and essentials sit on top of housing.

The takeaway is symmetrical: renting concentrates the cost in one line; owning spreads it across several. That is why the margin tables now carry four housing paths side by side, renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear, so the difference between still paying a mortgage and having paid it off is visible for every income group, one person or two. Either way, the share of income consumed is set by the income, which is why the report publishes all of them, for every state and district, every month.

PART 8

08 Where You Live Changes the Math

Every figure so far is a national average, and national averages hide how much geography matters. The report adjusts every essential-cost category for local price levels (using the federal government's Regional Price Parities), and two states, Alabama and Alaska, show how much it changes:

MARKET RENT

$1,382 → $1,883+

MARKETPLACE PREMIUM

$743 → $1,043+

Monthly Zillow market rent in Alabama vs. Alaska, and the coasts run higher still.

The same average marketplace premium for one person, Alabama vs. Alaska.

EVERYDAY ESSENTIALS

0.89× → 1.02×+

Local price factors applied to food, utilities, and other essentials, state by state.

STATE INCOME TAX

$0 → hundreds

Some states collect no income tax; others collect hundreds a month.

Every district, counted

The report runs the same subtraction in every one of the 435 congressional districts. Here is how many districts end the month negative, for each income group and housing track, one-person and two-person:

HOUSEHOLD	ONE PERSON			TWO PEOPLE
	RENTER	OWNER	MARGIN RANGE (RENTER)	RENTER	OWNER	MARGIN RANGE (RENTER)
One adult / Two adults GROUP A · CPI-U	435 of 435	434 of 435	-$4,338 to -$59	410 of 435	405 of 435	-$4,820 to +$5,957
Median household GROUP A · CPI-U	363 of 435	342 of 435	-$3,879 to +$2,870	363 of 435	342 of 435	-$3,879 to +$2,870
Senior 65+ / Senior couple 65+ GROUP A · CPI-U	339 of 435	242 of 435	-$3,971 to +$2,862	299 of 435	241 of 435	-$3,837 to +$4,770
Social Security / Two Social Security GROUP B · CPI-W	435 of 435	435 of 435	-$5,456 to -$1,837	435 of 435	435 of 435	-$6,406 to -$2,555

Districts where net income minus required obligations is below zero, one-person and two-person tracks, August 2026 report data, all 435 districts. Owner counts use the blended owner cost. These are counts and ranges across all of them; the district tables in Appendix C carry each district's rank.

FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Every district in the report is listed with its representative's name, and every state with both senators, so any House or Senate office can open its own row and read the margins for the households it represents. A renting adult on a per-person income ends the month behind in every district in the country; a household on the average Social Security benefit ends behind in every district on both housing tracks. Two incomes do not close the gap in most districts: two renting adults still end the month behind in 410 of the 435 districts, and a senior couple ends behind in 299 of the 435 on the renter track. Even where the median household does fine, the same district's other rows usually do not.

This is why the report behind this guide is published for all 50 states and all 435 congressional districts. The margins where you live, for every household type, may be meaningfully wider or narrower than the national rows in this guide, and the state and district tables are where you can see your own.

PART 9

09 How the Monthly Report Is Organized

This guide summarizes national averages; the full report behind it is published monthly and is built the same way for everyone. Knowing its structure makes it easy to find your own numbers:

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1 Four data tabs. One-person and two-person versions, at the state level (50 rows) and the congressional-district level (435 rows). Every state and district is ranked by one disclosed rule, and no place is otherwise featured or singled out. | 4 Four baselines, seven income groups, same method. Every row applies the identical subtraction to all seven income groups, exactly as shown in Part 6, and each group uses one price index end to end: Group A rows the CPI-U, Group B rows the CPI-W. |
| 2 Columns are cost categories. Housing, healthcare, food, transportation, utilities, phone, internet, and the rest, each mapped to a named source. | 5 A monthly schedule. The report is rebuilt each month with the newest official data, and fails closed if a live source is unavailable. |
| 3 Two housing tracks everywhere. The renter track (market rent) and the homeowner track (Selected Monthly Owner Costs) are published side by side for every row. | 6 A public paper trail. Every source file is logged with a cryptographic fingerprint, every formula is publicly disclosed, and every build runs an automated quality check before release. |

The design principle is uniformity: the same data, for every place, on the same schedule, in the same format, and the same arithmetic for every household type.

PART 10

10 Why No Official Source Publishes This

A fair question: if the comparison is this straightforward, why doesn't a government agency already publish it? The answer is that no federal agency publishes monthly rent in actual dollars at the congressional-district level. The pieces exist, but not in the form this comparison needs.

- The Bureau of Labor Statistics publishes rent as a percent change in an index: for the country, four regions, and about seventy-five metro areas, not as a dollar figure per district.
- The Department of Housing and Urban Development publishes Fair Market Rent in dollars, but annually and lagged twelve to twenty-four months by survey design.

So the gap being filled is not a quality gap; it is a gap in the existence of the measurement. That is the one place a non-federal source is used for rent: the Zillow Observed Rent Index, the only widely-cited, well-documented monthly publication of rent in dollars at the needed level of detail, a methodology cited by the Federal Reserve, Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development itself in selected analyses. It is always labeled as non-federal, never presented as government data.

TRUST AND TRACEABILITY

Where These Numbers Come From

Every figure in this guide can be traced to its source. Federal data does the heavy lifting; one non-federal dataset (Zillow market rent) is used only where no federal equivalent exists, and it is clearly labeled wherever it appears.

HOW THE FIGURES ARE KEPT HONEST

Every federal source is pulled from its official agency portal, and each retrieval is stamped with the date and a cryptographic fingerprint of the file, so the exact inputs can be re-checked later. Every published number is produced by a documented calculation; every calculation and disclosure is published alongside the data. And every build runs an automated quality check before release; this month's build passed all 515 tests.

These figures reflect the August 2026 report month (quality score 100/100), shown as national averages weighted by state population.

APPENDIX A

Quick-Reference Figures

The key numbers from this guide, in one place. National averages weighted by state population, August 2026 report month. Income is shown as the full path from gross to net, and the margin on all four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. All seven income groups shown with equal footing: the four one-person rows first, then the two-person rows. Group A rows are priced with the CPI-U, Group B rows with the CPI-W.

APPENDIX B-1A · STATE RANKINGS

The 50 States: Top 10 and Bottom 10, by Income Group

For each of the seven income groups, the ten states with the best margins (top 10) and the ten with the weakest margins (weakest 10), using each group's rank from the full state tables that follow. Ranks reflect the report's disclosed ranking rule, the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, so they may not sort exactly by the single margin shown here. The margin shown is the renter-track monthly margin; the full tables carry all four housing paths. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B-1 • STATE RANKINGS

One Adult, Per-Person Income: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for one adult living on that state's per-person income, taxed as a single filer. Health insurance required obligations is the one-person average marketplace premium (family premium for two people). Each state appears twice, once for one person and once for two people, so all seven income groups in this guide are covered across the four ranking sections. States are listed alphabetically. The rank column ranks states by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins; rank 1 has the best margin, rank 50 the weakest, and the same rank is shown in both sub-tables. The district tables in Appendix C are ranked the same way. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B·2 · STATE RANKINGS

Median Household Income: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household earning that state's median household income, taxed as a single filer. The median household represents a household of three or more people, so it has its own single table here instead of the one-person and two-person versions used for the other groups; its health line uses the two-person average marketplace premium. States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B·3 · STATE RANKINGS

Senior Household 65+: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household headed by someone 65 or older, on that state's median senior-household income, taxed with the 2026 senior deductions. Health is the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium (two premiums for two people). States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX B·4 · STATE RANKINGS

Social Security Benchmark: The 50 States, Ranked

Each state ranked for a household on the average retired-worker Social Security benefit, with zero federal, payroll, and state tax. Health is the $202.90 Medicare Part B premium (two premiums for two people). States are listed alphabetically, and rank 1 has the best margin. Each row traces gross monthly income through federal, payroll, and state tax to the net income that remains, then shows the monthly margin on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning free and clear. Negative margins are shown in red. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX C-0 · DISTRICT TABLES

All 435 Districts: Top 10 and Bottom 10, by Income Group

For each of the seven income groups, the ten districts with the best margins (top 10) and the ten with the weakest margins (weakest 10), using each group's rank from the full district tables that follow. Ranks reflect the report's disclosed ranking rule, the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, so they may not sort exactly by the single margin shown here. The margin shown is the renter-track monthly margin; the full tables carry all four housing paths. August 2026 report month.

APPENDIX C-1 • DISTRICT TABLES

One Adult, Per-Person Income: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for one adult living on the per-person income of that district, taxed as a single filer. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the one-person average marketplace premium for that district's state; the two-person table uses the two-person average marketplace premium. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

Median Household Income: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household earning the median household income of that district, taxed as a single filer. The median household is a whole-household figure covering households of every size, so it is shown once, as a single table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. Health inside required obligations is the two-person average marketplace premium for that district’s state. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

Senior Household 65+: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household headed by someone 65 or older, on that district's median senior-household income, taxed with 2026 senior deductions. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the standard $202.90 Medicare Part B premium; the two-person table includes two Part B premiums. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

Social Security Benchmark: All 435 Districts

Every congressional district, for a household living on the average retired-worker Social Security benefit, with zero federal, payroll, and state tax. Each district appears in both the one-person and the two-person table. Districts are listed alphabetically; the rank column ranks all 435 districts by the average of the one-person renter and blended-owner margins, rank 1 is the best, and the same rank is shown in both tables. Read across each table: gross monthly income, the federal, payroll, and state tax taken out, the net income that remains, then the monthly margin (net income – required obligations) on four housing paths: renting, owning at the blended owner cost, owning with a mortgage, and owning with the mortgage paid off. The two-person block repeats the full income path, gross to net, and the same four margins, using two-person income, taxes, and expenses. Health inside required obligations is the standard $202.90 Medicare Part B premium; the two-person table includes two Part B premiums. Negative margins are red; positive margins are navy.

All four tables: monthly margin = net monthly income – required obligations (housing + healthcare + essential living costs) in that district. Renter track uses market rent; homeowner track uses blended owner costs. Other essentials combines recreation, apparel, education & communication, telephone, internet, and other goods & services. August 2026 report month, whole-dollar rounding. Like the state rankings, each table is split into a one-person and a two-person sub-table carrying the full income path, gross to net, and all four margins; the median-household table is a whole-household figure shown once. Two-person figures use two-person income, taxes, and expenses.

REFERENCE

Plain-Language Glossary

Consumer Price Index

A monthly measure of how the cost of a fixed basket of goods and services changes over time; the basis for most inflation figures.

CPI-U

The “All Urban Consumers” index, the headline inflation number in the news: the index BLS publishes for all urban consumers, about 93 percent of the population. Group A rows use it.

CPI-W

The “Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers” index: the index BLS builds from wage-earner and clerical households, about 29 percent of the population and part of the CPI-U population. Federal law uses it to adjust Social Security. Group B rows use it.

Aged-couple benefit

The Social Security Administration's published average monthly benefit for a retired couple who both receive benefits; it is the income for the Two Social Security row.

Relative importance (weight)

The official share of the Consumer Price Index basket assigned to a category: how big that spending “slice” is, and therefore how much it moves the index.

Owners' equivalent rent

A stand-in the Consumer Price Index uses to estimate what homeowners would pay to rent their own homes; it carries a large weight in the basket.

Required obligations

In this guide's tables, the sum of housing, healthcare, and essential living costs subtracted from income to find the monthly margin.

Zillow Observed Rent Index

A non-federal, monthly measure of market rent in dollars, used here because no federal source publishes rent in dollars at the district level.

Selected Monthly Owner Costs

A Census figure combining a homeowner's regular monthly housing costs into one blended line; it forms the housing line in the homeowner track.

Index group (A or B)

Each income group uses one index end to end: its weights, its price updating, and its headline rate. Group A rows (One adult, Two adults, Median household, Senior 65+, Senior couple 65+) use the CPI-U. Group B rows (Social Security, Two Social Security) use the CPI-W. No row mixes the two.

Average marketplace premium before subsidy

The average monthly premium across marketplace plan selections in a state, before any premium tax credit; the healthcare line for households on marketplace coverage.

Medicare Part B premium

The standard monthly medical-insurance premium; it is the healthcare line for the two senior baselines.

Regional Price Parities

A federal Bureau of Economic Analysis measure of how much prices in each state sit above or below the national average; the report uses it to localize essential costs.

Monthly margin

Net monthly income minus required obligations: positive if income covers the essentials with room to spare, negative if it does not.

End of guide. An educational, plain-language explanation of the Consumer Price Index and the gap between measured inflation and real monthly costs, shown for seven income groups with equal weight. It takes no position on any policy or program, supports or opposes no legislation, and offers no financial or voting advice. Figures reflect the August 2026 report month (quality score 100/100) and national averages weighted by state population for all seven income groups, one person and two; the state and district tables carry the same detail for every place.

BEFORE YOU GO

Using Your Row

Three ways to put this report to work. Find your district in Appendix C and your state in Appendix B, and read the margin for the household most like yours. Compare the four housing paths in your row; the difference between them is the report's answer to "what would change the math where I live." And check back next month: the report is rebuilt with the newest data on a fixed schedule, so your row is re-measured every month, and any change in your margin appears the month it happens.
